Army War College, 1996 OCLC Number: (OCOLOC)44376447 Subject: China -- Foreign relations -- Japan. Excerpt: . . . believes informs most Chinese policymakers and intellectuals. It contains six propositions: 1. The Chinese are a great people, and China is a great nation. 2. The Chinese nation deserves a much better fate than that which it has experienced in the modern world. 3. China should be accorded compensatory treatment from those powers which have insulted or injured it in the past. 4. As a great nation, China naturally occupies a central position in world affairs and must be treated as a Great Power. 5. Chinas national sovereignty must be respected absolutely, and such respect precludes any foreign criticism of Chinas internal politics. 6. Chinas special virtue in international affairs consists in the fact that its foreign policy is based not on expediency but on immutable principles that express universal values such as 18 justice and equity. Chinas foreign policy expresses these attitudes in Beijings obsession with sovereignty. Noninterference in the internal affairs of other states is a universally recognized principle of international comity, but it is typically emphasized most strongly by small powers who fear the intrusion of larger states. Because Beijing purports to be a major power, and it consciously seeks to attract foreign investment and expand foreign trade, both activities which in important ways depend upon and intensify the high degree of economic and communications interpenetration in the world today, its extreme emphasis on sovereignty and attacks on any criticism of Chinese policy as infringements on sovereignty are unusual. But if Levines informal ideology is widely held, this position is at least under-standable. Nationalism...
