As the population of Wilmington increased, creating a greater demand for the more ready edible foods, the farmers began to supplement the general crops with the production of truck crops, fruits, dairy products, and poultry products. The survey showed that in 1925, truck crops and fruits amounted to about one fifth of the total farm sales, poultry products about one-fifth, and dairy products about onethird. These items brought in $2,547 of the $3,654 total receipts per farm in 1925. Topography.--The topography of northern New Castle County varies from rolling to hilly. Its elevation ranges from about 100 to 400 feet above sea level. The slopes are not, as a rule, so steep as to prevent cultivation or to cause excessive erosion, but the freedom from erosion is, in part, due to the mellow, absorptive nature of the soil. Only...
